

She said that time is unfair, to a woman her age
Now that wisdom has come, everything else fades
She said she realizes, she's seen her better days

She said she can't look back, to her days of youth
What she thought were lies, she later found was truth
She said her daddy had dreams, but he drank them away
And her mother's to blame, for the way she is today

Life's river shall rise
She said... and then only the strong shall survive
She said... but I'm feeling quite weak
She said... will you comfort and forgive me
Mmmmm, she said

She said she's still searching, for salvation's light
And yet she wishes all day, and then she prays all night
She said she won't speak of love, because love she's never known
And it's moments like these, she hates to be alone

Life's river shall rise
She said... and then only the strong shall survive
She said... but I'm feeling quite weak
She said... will you comfort and forgive me
Mmmmm, she said

[Solo]

Life's river shall rise
She said... then only the strong shall survive
She said... but I'm feeling quite weak
She said... will you comfort and a-forgive a-me
Mmmmm, she said

Life's river shall rise
She said... then only the strong shall survive
She said... but I'm feeling quite weak
She said... will you comfort and a-forgive, forgive a-me
She said

Forgive me
She Said
Forgive me
She Said
